ECONOMY IN COAL IS URGED BY THE FUEL ADMINISTRATION

Non-essential Industries
May Have Their Quota
Reduced to Save Coal

SITUATION BECOMING SERIOUS

Industrial idleness for a short period may be forced upon the nation unless the most drastic measures are adopted for the economical use of fuel. This measure of economy applies to domestic as well as manufacturing consumers, it being possible that the supplies to the latter class will be curtailed. This announcement was made by Fuel Administrator Garfield in Washington on Monday, who said he was willing to accept the responsibility at permitting the nation to accept the summer conditions as a matter of course, and face the consequences when industries would be forced to shut down again, during the winter months because of transportation congestion and inadequate coal supply.

While no definite order was issued by Dr. Garfield he felt that some definite plan of conservation which would involve the curtailment of some of the less essential industries was imperative to the national welfare with the war time activities making extraordinary demands upon the coal production of the nation.

One of the industries which has been fighting against a drastic curtailment order, it is said, is that engaged in the manufacture of pleasure automobiles. The fuel administration has advocated a curtailment of 75 per cent in this direction and it was estimated on Monday that drastic regulations would be forced, not only by the inadequate coal supply, but by a shortage of steel and other materials.

A saving of 60,000,000 tons is the one possible avenue of escape from national disaster, according to Dr. Garfield, who says that the necessities of war must be supplied.

The fuel administration advises all domestic consumers to secure their coal during the summer months, and in this manner relieve the railroads of a great deal of traffic during the fall and winter months, when transportation lines will be crowded with other materials essential for war work. This request applies to the people of Charleroi as well as every other community in the United States.

"THE CROSS BEARER"

Tremendous story of the invasion of Belgium the wars most thrilling story retold in a masterly way on screen. The Cross Bearer which tells the remarkable story of Cardinal Mercier, the world famous Belgian prelate who has stood up so stoutly for the rights of his countrymen against the aggressions of the German oppressors.

The story is an extremely thrilling one, excitement abounds in this picture and it is a splendid view of the terrific hardships suffered by the Belgians and of the heroic efforts made

110TH INFANTRY NOW IN FRANCE

Letter from Co. A Boy Says
They Are Now in Rest
Camp in That Country

REPORTS ALL OF THEM WELL

Sheriff and Mrs. F. B. Wickerham of Washington, have received a letter from their son Harold, who is a member of Company A, 110th Infantry, who says that the regiment is "somewhere in France" in a rest camp. He stated they landed in England and after a day's rest moved on, and on the third day were in France in a rest camp, "with emphasis on the rest." He said all the boys were well and they were getting plenty to eat. He reports an enjoyable trip across. He has had no papers or letters from home since he left New York and he and every other member of the Company, he says, is anxious for them.

This letter is the first real information friends and relatives in this section have had as to the whereabouts of the 110th Infantry. It was surmised that the men were still in England, where it was supposed they would remain for a number of weeks, but the letter from Sheriff Wickerham's son dispels all doubts, and makes it manifest that the 110th in whose ranks are many local boys are now in the final stages of their training and that in a short time will be taking part in the great battle now under way in Picardy and Flanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Johnson and children of North Charleroi, accompanied by Mrs. Johnson's sister, Mrs. Nathaniel E. Cullen, motored to Rices Landing and spent the week end with relatives.

by the cardinal to alleviate their sufferings.

"The Cross Bearer" will be the super-attraction on Wednesday June 12th, (Tomorrow) at the Majestic Theatre and the management recommends this masterly production to the patrons of this playhouse. 6-11.

CAMPAIGN IS ORGANIZED TO PROMOTE SALE OF WAR STAMPS

GERMAN ALIEN WOMEN MUST PREPARE TO REGISTER

Chief Albright calls attention to the necessity of German alien women coming to his office beginning the 17th of June and registering as provided for by the new United States laws. Registrations will take place up to and including June 26. Any who fail to register in that time will be apprehended and likely interned for the remainder of the war.

TAX SALE IS POSTPONED

Liens Against Property Are Being Held Up For A Short Time

MANY COMPLICATIONS ARISE

Monday was the first day fixed for the sale of certain Washington county properties by the county treasurer, for delinquent taxes. However after a few sales had been made, it was decided after a conference to postpone further sales until next Monday. Many complications have arisen in the matter of these sales. It is the first year that such sales have been made by the county treasurer and a large number had been advertised. Since then many circumstances have arisen to complicate matters. Settlements had been made on some of the properties advertised. Among the properties in the list were some of J. V. Thompson's holdings. These have been held over pending the outcome of litigation in the United States Courts. In the list were some properties from Charleroi, but they will all be taken care of before they are permitted to go to sale.

Effort Will Be Made to Have

Take Full Quota

SALE ON SYSTEMATIC BASIS

Kerfoot W. Daly was in Pittsburg Monday attending a meeting of representatives from counties in the Pittsburg district, at which time plans were laid for the War Savings certificate drive.

By proclamation of the President June 28 has been designated as National War Savings day, at which date it is expected that the entire issue of Thrift Stamps and War Savings Certificates, totaling $2,000,000,000, will be either sold or pledged as sold to the people of the country. The quota for Washington county is $8,000,000. It is estimated that less than half a million dollars of these small government securities have been sold, so that within the next three weeks the job remains for disposing of the remainder of the quota. The plan which will be used is one which was initiated in the state of Nebraska and carried out successfully. The state's quota was $28,000,000 and $83,000,000 have been sold or pledged.

Cards will be placed in the hands of every individual in every section of the country by solicitors, which will be in the nature of obligations to the government. The people will be asked to sign these cards obligating themselves to purchase between this date and January 1, 1919, a certain amount of war savings certificates in sums from $1,000 down, to according to each one's means.

The idea is to make a thorough canvass, affording each individual the opportunity of signing up for these certificates, in order that the government may know definitely that the entire issue of these securities will be taken by the end of the present year.

Those who subscribe for stamps or certificates to the sum of $1,000 will be placed in what is known as the "Pershing Limit Club," and it is hoped to make this club just as large as there are people able to invest that sum in war savings certificates. War Savings societies will be established and a systematic effort will be made to secure definite pledges for the entire quota assigned to Washington county.

THE AIR RAIDS

Germany wants to call off air raids on towns outside the field of operations, and has made tentative suggestions through neutral sources for a parley on this phase of the present war.

As long as Germany was able to carry the war to defenseless towns, and murder women and children and destroy property with impunity it was all right; such raids were only incidental to the large field operations and all of the territory of an enemy was open to bombardments from the air from the "back of the land." However, since the allied forces have placed their air squadrons along the front in greater numbers, and are prepared to drop hundreds of tons of bombs on the towns in the Rhine provinces, killing many of the citizens and destroying property, the Hun looks at the situation in a different light.

It was all right as long as the Germans had this field of operations to London and other English towns outside the war zone from the air and according to the "back of the land," these attacks were perfectly justified.

However, the situation is being rapidly changed. The Hun is getting back to his own medicine. This time he is being "bombed" daily from the air and great damage is being done to property. Now the Hun is showing up and like a whipped dog he wants to call the air battle off.

Uncle Sam's answer well as those of our allies should be, "No. Doing so. The war ought to be carried to the Hun on land and sea and in the air, and from every point of vantage.

he should be given a full measure of that Englishness he has been giving to defenseless people of other countries. No reliance can be placed in his word. He broke sacred treaties to suit his own purpose; he violated the laws of civilized warfare, and his conduct has been like a savage's.

than a civilized creature. The only way to teach such people is to apply force to the limit and crush the millitaristic system of Germany which is responsible for this horrible war.

There should be no let up in any activity in dealing with the Hun. We give him the limit.

RIGHT IN THE GAME

The American army is going to be in the big offensive now on in France.
The Germans have launched what seems to be their fourth big push in the hope of being able to force things to a decision on the western front.

The French and British are holding back and from what Gen. Foch says it is likely the allies now contemplate taking a hand in beginning an offensive, which may put a different face on the present battle front.

In any event, the American army must now be reckoned as a great factor in every campaign from this time on. Our men have been going over at a rapid rate for several weeks and the strength of our forces has evidently reached the point where Gen. Pershing deems it advisable to send them to the line to furnish the pushing force which they are intended—pushing the Hun back and bringing the war to an end.

Reports from France indicate the high morale of the American boys. In the battles in which they have participated during the last few weeks they have shown a spirit and a determination that is a revelation to the French and British. The American soldier is an apt pupil; he will learn quickly and after getting his bearings will likely be teaching his tutors points about the game they never dreamed of. Likewise the Boche will receive some pointed pointers which will not only disturb his equanimity, but convince him that in spite of the submarines, the Americans were able to put an army into the field capable of defeating the best troops the Germans can produce even with their 44 years of preparation.

ROAD REPAIR

The continued use of the improved roads of the country by motor trucks on the way to sea ports for shipment to France, has brought about the realization more forcibly than ever, that some standard methods should be adopted whereby the care of these roads would be looked after continually.

The usual mode in Pennsylvania is to allow the roads to be almost worn out before any repairs are made, which is an expensive as well as an unsatisfactory method. American road building has been a costly undertaking and to permit highways which have been improved to deteriorate on account of lack of repairs certainly does not show that judgment which should guide all public officials.

In Massachusetts it is quite different. Their roads are not allowed to remain unattended until resurfacing is required. As soon as a break appears it is repaired. This is the custom in Europe where good roads prevail and it should be the custom in America where highways have been improved. We have many samples of roads practically destroyed before any repair work is done on them and then a large expenditure of money is required to put them in shape for service. We ought to get away from this method.

OUR CASUALTY LIST

The American casualty list in France, up to and including Sunday, totals 7,325. Of this number 2,297 have been deaths, men either killed in action, died of wounds or died of disease, while 4,046 have been wounded or are missing.

Considering the fact that many of our troops have been in France for a year, and that we have been occupying a portion of the battle line for several months, the list is not a large one. However, with the beginning of great offensives which will last through the summer, it is expected that the list will grow quite rapidly from now on, showing greater numbers among the casualties. After some time boys are going to exact a toll from the Huns out of all proportions from what they will inflict on the boys in khaki.

"The colored troops fought nobly," was an expression coined during the civil war. Reports received from the battle front in France indicate that the colored troops have never forgotten their first lesson for they are fighting nobly, but with such vim and vigor as to call for unstinted praise. The colored man is something to be proud of.

Trawlers Net a U-Boat

A Dutch newspaper prints the story of a German U-boat which was caught in a British trap and towed into a British port. The story comes from a member of the U-boat's crew who escaped from England and is interned in Holland.

"We had sighted some English fishing boats off the English coast and were maneuvering for attack when their curious movements led us to suspect a trap so we dived. We proceeded slowly, but presently the screw began to beat irregularly and the commander could not make out what had happened.

"After about two hours the water seemed curiously still, and the commander decided to come to the surface.
When we emerged we were alongside a quay where stood a number of smiling British sailors. We were in a British port, towed in like a dead fish."

Phrenological.

An odd reminder, says the Independent, of the days when phrenology was popular as a means of "reading character," with a sly dig at the tendency of its professors to give complimentary explanations of the "bumps," is found in a letter from Elizabeth Barrett Browning advertised for sale in a London bookseller's catalogue. It reads in part: "Do you believe in phrenology?
Did you ever consult a phrenological oracle? and did it answer, 'My son, thou art invincible?'"

Early-Day Buttons.

The ancients lacked buttons—one wonders, indeed, how they got along without them, but evidently they possessed studs of modern pattern, such as those with which we fasten our cuffs and collars. And, in truth, they did even have a kind of button (though not sewn on), which fastened garments with a pin and hook exactly in the way our brooches and clasp pins operate.—Exchange.

Tripoli in History.

Early in the eighth century Tripoli was conquered by the Arabs. In 1510 it was taken by Spain and in 1551 it was conquered by Turkey and held a long time. While a Turkish possession Tripoli was a resort of pirates and at different times several European powers sent fleets to bombard its capital. The United States made war on it in 1805. In 1911 war broke out between Italy and Tripoli, regarding the rights of Italian citizens in Tripoli. An Italian army landed in Tripoli and in February, 1912, the Italian parliament passed a bill annexing Tripoli. In October, 1912, a treaty was signed by which Turkey ratified the annexation, and since then Tripoli has remained an Italian possession.

given to the dispersal of a meeting of Lancashire cotton operatives in St.
Peter's field, Manchester, England, July 16, 1819, called to discuss parliamentary reform. Eleven were killed and more than 500 hurt by the constabulary. Hence the name Peterloo was made from the name of the field in fancied resemblance to that of Waterloo.

The Voice.

Some expert announces that the human voice is produced by forty-four different muscles. It might be added that when those forty-four muscles are not co-ordinating as they should the resulting sound often produces violent agitation in at least forty-four different nerves in the body of the second part, if there happens to be such within hearing.—Providence Bulletin.

Wisdom in Tolerance.

The tolerant man is the open-minded man, the mentally-balanced man, the understanding man. He knows that he himself is not the sole repository of human wisdom. He knows that wisdom will not die when he does. He knows that usually he can learn something from the humblest of his associates.

Intensifying Blue Prints.

An under-exposed blue-print can be intensified by moistening its surface with a sponge dampened with peroxide of hydrogen. Old blue-print paper which would otherwise produce an indistinct copy need not be thrown away if treated with peroxide after the print has been exposed and "fixed."

Tantalum's Great Value.

Tantalum, owing to its hardness, makes good material for writing pens, which are less expensive than iridiumtipped gold nibs. Pens from this metal, treated with a special hardening process, prove superior to all others, and are not corroded by any inks.

Use of Oxalic Acid.

In using oxalic acid to remove any ink stain always follow with a few drops of javelle water, which counter-acts and neutralizes the oxalic acid.
Then rinse with boiling water to remove both of these chemicals, so that the fiber will remain untouched.

ONE CAUSE OF HIS SUCCESS

Letter of Charles Dickens Reveals Cause Which Great Writer Gave His Books and Readings.

In a recent sale of Dickens' autographs in London this letter, written while he was in the United States, appears:

"I should never have made any success in life if I had been shy of taking pains, or if I had not bestowed upon the least thing I have ever undertaken, exactly the same attention and care that I have bestowed upon the greatest. Do everything at your best. It was but last year that I set to and learned every word of my Readings, and from ten years ago till last night I have never read to an audience but I have watched for an opportunity of striking out or inserting somewhere. Look at such of my manuscripts as are in the library at Gads' and think of the patient hours devoted year after year to single lines. . . .
The weather is very severe here, and the work is very hard. Dolby (his manager) having been violently pitched into by the mayor of New Haven (a town at which I am to read next week) has gone off boldly this morning with defiant written instructions from me to inform the said mayor that if he fail to make out his case he (Dolby) has to return all the money taken, and to tell him that I will not set foot in his jurisdiction, whereupon the New Haven people will probably fall upon the mayor in his turn and lead him a pleasant life."

HOW INDIANA LOST CITIZEN

Escapade That Caused Youth to Turn His Thoughts Toward the "Wild and Woolly" Region.

Harry Coonse, ranchman and real estate expert in the far Northwest, returned to Indianapolis from his home near Seattle after an absence of fourteen years. It is not widely known, but Mr. Coonse, when a boy of 15, started in business as a helper on a delivery wagon of I. S. Ayres & Co., started and ended his dry goods career in an unusual and interesting manner.

Harry, out of his first month's wages, had bought a rifle and a box of cartridges. One evening in Park avenue the delivery man went into a house with a package, leaving Harry on the driver's seat in charge of what was common at that time—a Texas must-ang—well broken, but still worth watching. Instead of holding the lines Harry spent the interim handling a new rifle. As often happens, the gun was discharged and the bullet struck the mustang. Harry made one grab for the lines, missed, tumbled off the seat and the wagon disappeared down the street, strewn packages in its path.

At dawn the next morning the horse and wagon were found in the Pleasant run bottoms, near the place where the furnaces of the Citizens Gas company now stand. Harry had already resigned.—Indianapolis News.

Gunners Making Glorious Record.

The gunners of the armed guards on merchantmen have made a record of which we may be justly proud. The contests of the Silver Shell, which sent down the submarine which attacked it; of the Morean, on which the men stayed at their guns until the flames flared up to the top of the smokestacks on the burning ship; of the Campana, whose gunners fought for hours until their ammunition was exhausted; of the J. L. Luckenbach, which, though under a rain of shells, hit nine times and temporarily disabled, fought a submarine for four hours, before aid arrived, and later managed to reach port under her own steam; of the Armenia, which, though torpedoed, was saved through the courage and resources of its captain, crew and armed guard; of the Navajo, the Mongolia, the Petrolite and a dozen others are notable enough to be recorded in the naval history of the time.—Josephus Daniels in America Review of Reviews.

Leonardo da Vinci Amazes Surgeons.

Though written four hundred years ago, Leonardo da Vinci's book on anatomy has only recently been published, and surgeons are only now discovering the marvels it contains.

Lecturing recently on it in London, Prof. William Wright pointed out that when it was written the circulation of the blood, osmosis, oxygen and the microscope were all unknown. All doctors believed that the arteries were full of free air and that the blood was aerated in the heart. The interior arrangement of the heart was also misunderstood. But Leonardo denied that air entered the heart, and wrote that the blood was "refreshed" in the lungs; he described accurately the anatomy of the heart and large blood vessels and the action of the muscles of the chest and abdomen in respiration.

Electrons and Atoms.

Atoms are minute particles of matter, each about one-three-hundredth part of an inch in diameter. They are so small that if the earth were made up of baseballs it would be a fair model of a drop of water made up of atoms. The electron is smaller still. It has a diameter of about one-hundred-thousandth that of an atom, so that if an atom were represented by a sphere 100 yards in diameter the electron would be about the size of a pin's head. It has been said that the electrons which form an atom can be compared to a swarm of gnats in a cathedral or other large building. As atoms are made up of electrons, so molecules are made up of atoms.

Jacob J. Swank Praises Tanlac

Retired Johnstown Business Man Feels It a Duty to Make Facts Known

Jacob J. Swank a retired business man of 625 Napoleon St., Johnstown, Pa., said recently:

"I believe I had used almost everything imaginable before I took Tanlac. At night, when I slept, which was poorly, I evidently swallowed accumulations of mucus, as I invariably awakened in the morning choked and nauseated. That is the way I judge that my stomach became affected.

"My hearing became impaired and the itching in my ears became almost unbearable, and there were roaring noises also. I had a most unpleasant taste in my mouth and scarcely any appetite.

I began to improve rapidly under the Tanlac treatment. My whole system is now right, the accumulations in my nose and throat have disappeared, my hearing has improved, I eat better, my sleep is restful and I feel better every way. I now consider myself physically able to throw off all other symptoms. I am a well man."

Tanlac, the Master Medicine is now sold here by Piper's Drug Store.

MAY ARRANGE FOR A JULY 4 DEMONSTRATION

At a short called session of borough council, held Monday evening an informal discussion as to the advisability of holding a demonstration in Charleroi on the 4th of July took place. While no plans were outlined, it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that some sort of a celebration be held here on that day and it may be that council will arrange for the same. Members of council also discussed the fire hose question, but came to no conclusion.

NINETEEN MEN LEAVE FOR CAMP

Nineteen men left Donora Monday afternoon on the 4:20 train for Camp Humphreys, Accotink, Va., to enter the military service of the United States. These men were from the Fifth District of Washington county and filled out the quota of May 28th which was 21 short when it left on that date. Two men, both from Donora, were inducted into the service by boards of other districts, one from Gary, Indiana and one from Baltimore, Md., these men being employed in these cities when the call came. The men assembled at the registration headquarters in Donora at one o'clock Monday afternoon, where they were addressed by John O. Watson, president of the board. James O. Watson of North Charleroi was made Captain and after receiving their instructions the men were excused until 3:45 o'clock when they again reported and a short time later, marched to the station, where they entrained for Pittsburgh. These men will likely be assigned to Companies in which the other boys from this district are now serving.

MANY WEAPONS ARE TAKEN FROM ALIENS

State officers report that fully 1,000 guns and revolvers and numerous other weapons have been confiscated by the state authorities acting under the acts forbidding unaturalized aliens from owning or possessing firearms, since the first of the year. The bulk of these weapons have been confiscated by the game wardens, who are charged with the enforcement of the law by the State Game Commission. In the same period the Game Wardens and State Policemen have brought 473 prosecutions against foreigners for having firearms in their possession. The policy of the commission is not to burden foreigners with suits, but to pick out people as examples and impose fines while others are instructed as to what they must do.

RELIEVED RHEUMATICS

Recommending "Neutrone Prescription 99"

Since the introduction of "Neutrone Prescription 99" Rheumatic sufferers no longer fear the changeable winter weather. This new combination has many heretofore incurables on its relieved list.

"Neutrone Prescription 99" is different from others in that it treats rheumatism as a disease of the blood and by its general action eliminating rheumatic conditions. Its effect is immediate as well as lasting without any depressing after effects.

The whole system is benefited—lame, stiff and inflamed joint disappear where other remedies have failed.

It helps Nature restore the blood to its natural, healthy condition in its positive action, re-supplying what Nature fails to supply fast enough. Mail orders filled. 50c and $1.00 the bottle.

Homemade Paste.
Teachers and others who use much paste will appreciate a recipe for making it at home. Stir into a cup of four enough cold water to make it of a creamy consistency. Pour over this four cups of boiling water, stirring all the time, and cook five minutes. To this add one teaspoonful of powdered alum, pour into a bowl and beat till cold. Then add one teaspoonful carbolic acid and one teaspoonful or more of oil of clove or wintergreen. Pour into glasses or jars and cover with paraffin. This will keep indefinitely.

Ivory Photograph Needles.
The photograph a stylus of vegetable ivory has decided advantage over the old wooden needle, the usefulness of which is ended when it has played one record. The ivory point will stand the wear of six records, then when it has been filed over the bevel end can be used on six more. The vegetable ivory is produced by a Central and South American growth, the Phytolophus palm, which produces large clusters of seeds.

Before Day of Chronometer.
Longitude baffled all navigators until the chronometer came into use in 1735. The ancients and later navigators, including all the great discoverers, could find their latitude by observations of the sun's height, but they could determine their longitude only by "dead reckoning," or estimating their ship's progress from day to day. This system was uncertain and caused a great many shipwrecks.

Lucid English.
A recent advertisement contains the following: "If the gentleman who keeps the boot shop with the red head will return the umbrella of a young lady with whalebone ribs and an iron handle to the slate-roofed grocer's shop he will hear of something to his advantage, as the same is the gift of a deceased mother now no more with the name engraved upon it."

Road's Thick Ice Foundation.
At one point of a road recently constructed in Alaska, there is a solid ice foundation. At the surface there is a two-foot layer of moss and tundra, but previous mining operations at this point proved that there is a forty-foot bed of clear ice and six feet of gravel between the surface layer and bed rock.

Now in the Dodo Class.
Of the beasts familiar to us in our youth two, at least, have become extinct. One was the "consecrated cross-eyed bear" we used to sing about in Sunday school; the other that creature of wonderful speed and endurance, the "equator," or "menagerie lion" that ran around the earth.—Boston Transcript.

HAVE TO KNOW MULE NATURE

Drivers of Patient Animals Realize They Have Peculiarities and Must Be Humored.

An old, shag-bitten, hammer-headed, ewe-necked hill mare, slowly picking her way across the corral at the remount station at Camp Zachary Taylor, followed by a long string of mules walking in single file, heads down and ears wagging, served as illustration for an officer attached to the big camp command who had just finished remarking that "horse nature and mule nature and human nature were mighty contrary things any way you take them."

"Now, take those mules," he said. "The education of a pack mule is a thing that must begin early. He has two purposes in life. One is to carry 225 pounds day after day patiently and uncomplainingly, and the other is to fall off the bell mare of the train, regardless of where that animal may go. Well, there is in that corral an illustration of the stupidity of our training. The old mare has started after a drink of water and there goes every dail-blasted one of those fool mules after a drink of water."

Investigation revealed that the pack mule is not the only member of his family that has peculiarities that can be played upon or must be humored. It was learned that the larger mules, once teamed up or paired, must thereafter be worked together if each is not to suffer a loss in efficiency. Two strange mules will not work together anything like so well in the beginning as they will a few weeks later, after they have become well acquainted, and then if they are parted the whole process must be gone over with again.

GOOD COOK TO BE ENVIED

Always Sure of Popularity Is the Person Who Can Concoct Dishes That Are Appetizing.

To prove that there is nothing intrinsically humble or shameful in cooking it is only necessary to mention a burning or fishing party. The man who can turn out a palatable dish is envied and lauded. The college girl who can concoct midnight suppers over a can of frozen alcohol or a gas jet is sure of popularity. Many of the great of the earth have practiced cooking as an accomplishment. Louis XV, one of the extreme connoisseurs in the art of living, prided himself on his coffee. One of the most famous of table sauces was invented by a gentleman of Worcestershire. Many great ladies of the 18th century used to exchange recipes. Sir Kenelm Digby, an adventurous and scholarly soul, left a fat volume full of them, ranging from simple apple sauce to the most refined elaboration of game.

It is not even necessary that cookery should aspire to the phase called "artistic" to be artistic. Above all, the sauce, that idol of the professional chef, should be dictated from its bad eminence. The sauce is the mother of nightmares. The dish itself and not its accompaniments, is the thing. Cooking is real, cooking is earnest, and the gravy is not its soul.—Exchange.

Spruce Used in Airplanes.
Because the government needs all the spruce for airplanes, the piano manufacturers of the country are having a hard time to get sounding boards for their instruments. Spruce is the best wood the piano manufacturers can get for this purpose and they have used it in immense quantities for many years.

But sounding boards and airplane beams call for the same quality of stock—clear, straight-grained, tough-fibered and free from blemishes. In their desire to assist the government in airplane construction the piano manufacturers have agreed to curtail their output 30 per cent during the war. They can get along with the spruce stock now on hand for some time, they say. Meanwhile they will try to find a substitute for spruce. Several of the big spruce producing mills in the Grays Harbor district of Washington and along the Columbia river in Oregon that always have made a specialty of piano stock now are giving their attention to airplane material.

Darkness Above the Sky.

The projectile of the gun with which the Germans have been shelling Paris from a distance of seventy-five miles must rise in its trajectory to a height of twenty-four miles above the earth. The Scientific American says it is probable that at that height there is so little air that the sky loses its blue appearance, because there is hardly enough of it to produce the refraction of light which gives it its luminous tinge.

"If we could accompany this shell on its course," continues the Scientific American, "we should probably find the sky growing darker and darker until it becomes nearly black. In the black sky the sun would show as a ball of fire, while the stars which were not obliterated by the sun's light would also be visible. Below as we should have the reflection of sunlight from the earth and from the denser strata of the atmosphere."

Can Sleep Anywhere.

A soldier who enlisted and was sent to Houston was sent out to the trenches for training, and while on duty he was granted two hours' rest. He was allowed to sleep on the firing step of the trench, which, he said, is nine inches wide. He said when he comes back he will be able to sleep out

Americans Know A Good Thing

TRUST THE PEOPLE TO FIND OUT WHAT IS GOOD FOR THEM.

All over the country folks are learning, that after the long hard winter's pull, lack of green food and fresh air, they are usually run down, have no appetite, are nervous and in bad shape generally.

Spring to them is a season to be dreaded, their thin, watery, poisoned, clogged blood and weak nerves robs them of all ambition or desire to work and takes the pleasure out of life.

For such men and women doctors are recommending Phosphated Iron which goes to the very root of all blood impurities and nervous troubles. They claim it helps purify the blood by making it over anew, while the way it relieves tired, fagged out nerves is almost too good to be true.

The confidence that the American people and prominent doctors have shown in Phosphated Iron, while remarkable, is not surprising, as it is one of those honest preparations that never disappoints. As a man said in recommending to his neighbor, "it's results that count, and you can bank on Phosphated Iron it is the 'goods', everyone that tries it is a booster, it sure did put me on my feet when I was almost down and out."

Every man, woman and child that has thin, watery, impure blood, no strength, or appetite, weak nerves, and is all played out generally, can come back strong, be a live one once again, enjoy restful sleep and get up facing the world with a smile if they will try Phosphated Iron, the red blood and nerve builder.

To insure physicians and their patients getting the genuine Phosphated Iron we have put in capsules only do not take pills or tablets. Insist on capsules. W. F. Henning's and leading druggists everywhere.

Cities Must Help Farmers.

In any American city it may come to pass that men who know how to chop wood or pick cotton or harvest wheat will have to close their offices and stores during the periods of seasonal strain and come out and help the farmers. All the other countries at war have done that and we must do it if the need appears. Clarence Ousley, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

HAS CONFIDENCE IN AMERICA

English Writer Satisfied That Country's Spirit Is Undeveloped and Undeatable.

The soundness at core of the modern man has been one long triumphant demonstration. Take that wonderful little story of a certain British superintendant of the pumping station at some oil wells in Mesopotamia. A valve in the oil pipe had split and a fountain of oil was being thrown up on all sides; while thirty yards off and nothing between, the furnaces were in full blast.

To prevent a terrible conflagration and great loss of life, and save the oil wells, it was necessary to turn off the furnaces. The superintendant, without a moment's hesitation, sprang through the oil spray, turned off the furnaces, and died. Modern man has been doing things like that all through this war.

We Britons are an insular people, ignorant, for the most part, of anything outside our own empire; and it has struck me as a rather wonderful tribute to America that one could go the length of Britain and find hardly a creature who was not confident that Americans will display the same endurance, bravery and unselfishness that we have seen displayed by our own men all these years. Instinctively, we know and feel it.

There is something proud in Americans as in ourselves, something undeveloped and undeatable. It comes of our common cult of freedom and of the individual conscience, and in both our countries is a growing, not a withering, quality.—John Galsworthy in Harper's Magazine.

THINGS THAT GROW DOUBLE

Freaks of Nature That the Wisest of Men Find Some Difficulty in Explaining.

Nature does some strange things in the formation of vegetables, nuts and different kinds of fruits, an exchange states. It is quite common to find two or more growing together, and naturalists frequently run across some very curious freaks.

Double ears of corn are quite common. They grow side by side, and are sometimes of equal size; but usually one has a little better chance to grow and gets the advantage over the other.

A double ear on exhibition in one of the Western states was certainly a curiosity. One side was one variety of corn, while the other side was so different that it was hard to believe the two had grown so close together.

Double heads of wheat are quite common, but double grains are scarce. Grains of rye, however, are often double, and the same is true of rice.

Onions, radishes, beets, carrots, turnips, cabbages and other vegetables are often found in double form.

The prettiest specimens of double peaches are those with two seeds, as they are most distinctly double, being joined at a point about half-way from the stem of the blossom ends.

Dough Saved the Ship.

"Saved by a ton of dough" might be the title for an account of the adventures of the steamship Armenia in the submarine zone. The vessel was struck by a torpedo. Aboard was an armed guard of American seamen under the command of Chief Boatswain's Mate Stief Homiak, U. S. N. The naval men made all preparations for placing the passengers in lifeboats, for the ship had a wide breach below the water line and a second torpedo was momentarily expected; but they did not intend to abandon their vessel until they were sure it was going to sink. Going below they succeeded in checking the inflow of water to some extent by a patch made of a collision mat and some pieces of canvas, but there was still a formidable leak. Thereupon the sailors proceeded to smash open a large number of barrels of flour which they found in the hold and shoveled this material into the breach. Soon it was filled with an enormous mass of dough, which so effectually checked the leak that the ship was brought into port by her resourceful crew.

Neighborly Amenities.

Joe Uhllein, hunter of polar bears, polar stars, aurora boreales and other wild carnivorous harmless mammals. Including ducks, swans and Welsh rabbits, may be found at sunup and sundown with his trusty pruning knife and safety shears pruning and shearing all his plants and flowers, and Henry Thompson, his neighbor, says: "If Joe would only let nature take its course, the things that intended to come up this spring wouldn't wait until next fall." But Joe says: "I guess I know more about dandelions and pigweeds than Henry does. Why, just look at that statue of the replica of a polar bear I shot on the side of the house; he couldn't shoot a thing that looks like that even if he had a gun." and Henry in one of his "dandelion" tones replied: "I wouldn't need a gun to shoot at a thing like that," and disappeared through a slim crack in the fence with his unlighted cigar.—Milwaukee Journal.

Mule Is Doing His Bit.

The Missouri mule is doing his bit, and doing it well, in the present world conflict, just as he did it in the Civil war. In many sections at the front and along the lines of communication are places where mules are almost indispensable and where horses and motorcars are virtually useless. Pershing's engineers have testified to the worth of the mules in the requisitions they have made to Washington for the animals.

Devil and the Deep Sea.

The source of this expressive but rather cryptical proverb is not easily determined. It is usually held to have some connection with the miracle of the casting out of devils at Cadara and the rushing of the possessed swine into the waters. In Clark's Paraemologia, published in 1639, it is quoted as "Between the devil and the Deep Sea." The meaning, of course, is that there is a choice only between two terrible alternatives, and the allusion may be to some long-forgotten incident of legend or fiction.

Easy-Going People.

Any time is good enough for easy-going people. Any way is well enough. They are inclined to be sorry for the young man who sets his alarm clock for an early hour, and takes off his coat when he goes to work. But the road to success of any sort is never easy. Easy-going people jog along comfortably, knowing nothing of tense nerves and strained muscles, but when the day is over, the goal is still far in the distance.

Disease Due to Dietetic Errors.

I have come to the conclusion that more than half the disease which embitters life is due to avoidable errors in diet. . . . and that more mischief, in the form of actual disease, of impaired vigor, and of shortened life, accrues to civilized man from erroneous habits of eating than from the habitual use of alcoholic drink, considerable as I know that evil to be.—Sir Henry Thompson, M. D.

Why Women Bear Pain.

Women bear pain better than men, as is well known, but Dr. E. O'Neill Kane says that their tranquillity is often deceptive, being stoical submission rather than lack of feeling. He believes women are less often affected by shock than men; they endure surgical operations better and pass under anesthesia more rapidly, quietly and safely.

Has Almost Constant Rainfall.

Curiously enough, it is in India that we find the wettest town in the whole world, according to a British agricultural expert in India. The town, where there is an almost constant rainfall, is called Cherapunji, in Assam. Its average rainfall is 600 inches or 50 feet a year, which is nearly a foot a week.

Work Must Be Respected.

Any painter will tell you that the sketch he begins carelessly, with a slovenly scamping of paints, ends by disgusting him and is frequently left unfinished. Any embroiderer will admit the same experience. Work to be a pleasure must be respected. It must be approached as a dignified and an honorable affair.

True Friendship.

A true friendship is one of human kind's sweetest ties, and it should be sacredly regarded. That sterling soul who always has a smile for us—who sees in us only what is fine and commendable—should not, and will not, if we are made of the right stuff, be annoyed by our over-familiarity.

Dreaded Parthian Cavalry.

The most famous cavalrymen of antiquity were the Parthians. Their invasion of Judea, 40 B. C., resulted in such terrible devastation of the country that 100 years later the terrors of the Parthian invasion gave the Apostle John the idea for one of his most vivid pictures.

Nature the Nurse.

The human body is so adjusted that when attacked, it automatically defends itself, and when wounded it pulls out its first-aid kit to repair the injury. And living organisms of the lower animal world and the vegetable world are balanced just so.—Minneapolis Journal.

First Dill Pickle.

Robert had her first dill pickle recently. The next day at school Miss Bagg had her little pupils paint a daffodil. A few days later Robert said: "Mother, was that a daffodil pickle I had?"—Indianapolis News.

Bacon's Tribute to Books.

They are true friends that will neither flatter nor dissemble. Be you but true to yourself, applying that which they teach unto the party grieved, and you shall need no other comfort nor counsel.—Bacon "On Books."

Yes, When?

STORED MUCH FROZEN MEAT

German Authorities, in First Days of War, Mobilized All Resources of Refrigerating Plants.

Berlin has 2,200 tons of frozen meat in its municipal cold storage depots. The supply is replenished from time to time so that it remains at that figure. On their present meat ration of one-half pound, the Vossische Zeitung says, the Berliners are assured of meat enough to last all Greater Berlin two or three weeks, even if there should be a temporary stoppage of replenishment.

How the cold storage of pork has helped Germany to "tick it" is explained in an article in the Chemiker-Zeitung. Early in the war, realizing the serious effect of the British blockade on the meat supply, the government directed the refrigerating industry to mobilize its resources on the largest possible scale. It was ordered to make preparations for dealing with millions instead of thousands of pigs. Cold storage plants were enlarged, new ones built, and the system so extended that today there is hardly a local community without its own refrigerating facilities.

Every fortress has a freezing plant of its own. In case of siege it will assist materially in the preservation of perishable foods, especially meat, eggs, fish and butter.

"The German authorities," says the article, "have taken advantage of cold storage to the fullest extent, thereby greatly easing the economic conduct of the war."

TELL OF LONDON'S HISTORY

Collection of Wonderfully Interesting Relics in the Whitechapel Art Galleries.

In a small space in the Whitechapel art galleries there is a fascinating collection which reconstitutes the history of London from the days when the Britons watched the galleries of the Romans sweeping up the Thames river. There are bits of Roman pottery found in the Thames mud. Photographs and prints show how bits of the old Roman wall may still be touched by living hands. And so throughout the long story of the great old city there are remembrances of its varying phases, of its ceaseless change: a beautiful piece of carving by Grindling Gibbons, or one of his school in St. Paul's grotesquely carved brackets of wood that once supported the beams of Tudor houses; iron brackets beautifully wrought by ancient craftsmen; leather jacks, out of which some Falstaff quaffed his sack; clay pipes, smoked in Queen Elizabeth's day by men who sailed the Spanish main; the old Whitechapel parish register, telling of citizens who died of plague, or born and married in the days before the great fire, and when bells of old St. Paul's rang for joy and sorrow.

These, and many other relics, bring back the spirit of oldtime London to men and women who go to the quiet and restful place from the rush of modern life in Whitechapel.

Some Old-Day Battles.

The great odds in numbers which the British army has had to face on the western front is no rare experience in its annals. Wellington has borne witness to that fact in his remarks that Talavera was the only battle in which he had a numerical superiority, owing to the presence of the Spaniards, who, while showing much personal gallantry, were badly led. At all his other battles he had fewer men than the enemy. "At Salamanca I had 40,000 men, and the French perhaps 45,000. At Vittoria I had 60,000 men against 70,000. At Waterloo the proportion was still more against me. I had 56,000 to 58,000; Napoleon had near 80,000. The whole army in the south of France under my command was considerably larger than the force of Soult at the battle of Toulouse, but in numbers actually employed in that battle I had less than he." All of which goes to show that strength and success do not necessarily lie with mere weight of numbers. There are other factors vastly more essential.—Christian Science Monitor.

Braking Airplane While Flying.

A braking mechanism for airplanes has recently been introduced, according to the Popular Science Monthly. This consists of two rectangular planes of small area, mounted on a shaft that runs along the rear edge of the main plane, and passes through the fuselage. The control is by means of a hand-wheel and connections, which act in conjunction with a handbrake.

When an airplane is flying at a rate of a hundred miles an hour the air pressure is not less than 30 pounds to the square foot. It will thus be seen that the added resistance of a few extra square feet of canvas has a very great retarding action on the speed of the plane.

Scouts' War Gardens.

The food production and garden campaign of the Boy Scouts of America is well under way, says Boy's Life. Every scout and, indeed, every troop and every local council, according to reports, is definitely interested in some way.

This year every scout is asked to be responsible for securing one adult to agree to work with him on the scout's individual garden or on the troop garden or on the local council garden. The adult might be a scout's father, his brother or his sister's best fellow, his uncle or indeed any man who will faithfully stick to the job until the crops are harvested.
